voluntary environmental programs. Coglianesse was a founding editor of the peer-reviewed journal Regulation & Governance, and he currently serves on the board of the American Bar Association's Section on Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice.

Michael A. Fitts is the Dean and Bernard G. Segal Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Since becoming Dean in 2000, he has been a leading proponent of integrating legal teaching and scholarship with the approaches of other disciplines. He has previously clerked for the late Hon. A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and served as an attorney advisor in the Office of Legal Counsel at the U.S. Department of Justice, where he received a Special Commendation Award from the Attorney General of the United States for his work. Fitts is a member of the Executive Committee of the American Law Deans Association, where he serves as Vice President; the World Affairs Council; the Policy Advisory Board of The Reinvestment Fund; and the Law and Political Process Study Group of American Political Science Association.

Seth Kreimer's first article, Allocational Sanctions: The Problem of Negative Rights in a Positive State, set the terms for a generation of discussion of unconstitutional government manipulation of public benefits. His subsequent work has shaped analysis of governmental control of private information, abortion regulation, assisted suicide, and gay marriage. He has explored the implications of DNA testing in criminal justice, free speech on the Internet, and the dangers of abuse in the "war on terror." Kreimer has represented plaintiffs in a wide array of litigation. He most recently served as co-counsel in Miller v. Skumanick, enjoining threatened prosecution of child pornography charges against teenaged girls who appeared scantily clad in cell phone photos, and Buck v. Stankovic, enjoining denial of a marriage license to a citizen who wished to marry an undocumented non-citizen.

Deborah Pearlstein joined the University of Pennsylvania Law School in fall 2009 as a Visiting Faculty Fellow in national security and international human rights. She has also served as an Associate Research Scholar in the Law and Public Affairs Program at the Woodrow Wilson School for Public and International Affairs at Princeton University since 2007. Pearlstein previously clerked for Judge Michael Boudin of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, then for Justice John Paul Stevens of the U.S. Supreme Court. Her work has appeared in journals including the Harvard Law Review, Harvard

Journal of Law & Policy, and Columbia Human Rights Law Review, and she has taught courses in national security law, international human rights, and U.S. constitutional law at Stanford Law School and at Princeton University.

Kermit Roosevelt works in a diverse range of fields focusing on constitutional law and conflict of laws. His latest book, Conflict of Laws, offers an accessible analytical overview of conflicts. His prior book, The Myth of Judicial Activism: Making Sense of Supreme Court Decisions, sets out standards by which citizens can determine whether the Supreme Court is abusing its authority. He is also the author of In the Shadow of the Law, and has published in the Virginia Law Review, the Michigan Law Review, and the Columbia Law Review, among other scholarly journals.

Theodore Ruger brings fresh insight to the study of some of the oldest questions of American constitutional law, including the theoretical justifications for, and empirical contours of, the application of judicial authority. In exploring these issues, Ruger supplements traditional legal analysis with the methods of other disciplines, including history and political science. His work has appeared in the Harvard Law Review, Columbia Law Review, University of Pennsylvania Law Review, University of Pennsylvania Journal of Constitutional Law, Northwestern Law Review, and as the centerpiece of a symposium in Perspectives on Politics, a leading peer-reviewed political science journal.

The National Constitution Center, located at 525 Arch St. on Philadelphia's Independence Mall, is an independent, nonpartisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to increasing public understanding of the U.S. Constitution and the ideas and values it represents. The Center serves as a museum, an education center, and a forum for debate on constitutional issues. The museum dramatically tells the story of the Constitution from Revolutionary times to the present through more than 100 interactive, multimedia exhibits, film, photographs, text, sculpture and artifacts, and features a powerful, award-winning theatrical performance, "Freedom Rising." The Center also houses the Annenberg Center for Education and Outreach, which serves as the hub for national constitutional education. Also, as a nonpartisan forum for constitutional discourse, the Center presents – without endorsement – programs that contain diverse viewpoints on a broad range of issues.
